PORTFOLIO

Presented By: Heidi Colón

Hello!

This portfolio highlights three selected projects, consisting of one concept, one personal project, and one client project. Each project is accompanied by a brief overview of my role, design process, and the design decisions that shaped the final outcome.

FIRST PROJECT

- Problem: Lockheed Martin's 2023 homepage is clean but minimal, mostly white space and a small video hero. It doesn't reflect a brand built on power and security.
- Approach: I concepted a black and Lockheed-blue homepage with a full-width hero anchored by the SR-71 Blackbird. I chose it over an in-production aircraft to make visitors pause.
- Outcome: A concept showing how color and hero treatment can reinforce brand identity directly, with background imagery acting as dividers to keep the scroll cohesive.

SECOND PROJECT

- Problem: For my own content-creator persona, I needed an on-screen identity that holds up across streams, social, and merch, not just a logo.
- Approach: I built a full identity system with a black, crimson, and silver palette, a laurel-wreathed monogram, and a Quasimoda/Lato Bold pairing. It's designed to invert cleanly across four color combinations.
- Outcome: A bold, angular wordmark that reads the same on a business card, a t-shirt, or a stream overlay, giving the persona one consistent identity.

THIRD PROJECT

- Problem: A small business owner wanted to launch an online shop for spiritual silver jewelry, but she was building it herself on Wix with little technical background and no cohesive brand.
- Approach: I handled brand identity and logo end to end. After consultation exposed Wix's limits, I rebuilt the site in WordPress. At her request, I migrated it back to Wix so she could manage it herself.
- Outcome: A cohesive brand and a site she could share and maintain on her own over a 6-month engagement. I also built a high-fidelity mobile prototype in Figma.

SPIRIT OF LOVE – MOBILE UI

- Problem: The brand and website were set, but there was no design direction for how the shop would work on a phone. I also wanted to learn Figma by building something real.
- Approach: I built a high-fidelity mobile prototype in Figma, skipping low-fidelity wireframes so I could focus on learning the tool and exploring modern mobile UI trends.
- Outcome: A clickable prototype with simple navigation, including a bottom tab bar and a full-width Checkout button placed where a thumb naturally reaches. Skipping wireframes taught me that high-fidelity work often takes longer, not less.
